The Nautilus 801 is the latest version of B&W's longest-running franchise, the 801 loudspeaker, totally updated with design lessons learned from making the costly, visually striking Nautilus loudspeaker (see the sidebar, "The Inside Story"). The new speaker represents a substantial price increase over the 801 Series III, which retailed for $5500/pair, but B&W is quick to point out that the Nautilus 801 has been so totally redesigned that it would be fairer to compare the 801 Series III to ...

Hello, I'm sorry to dig out this old thread but I have a quick question. I am looking for a pair of B&W speakers and could get matrix 801 s2 or 802 s3 for about the same price. The room is 25m2. Not very big and I listen mostly quiet. I do 80% mixing and 20% mastering (but more and more mastering jobs come is so I had the idea of getting b&w's).
