'outerlands' of education scholarship, those usually confined to what might be called the 'othered' disciplines of education. This was a tactic used by Foucault for interrogating education. As Ball explains, citing Foucault, by focusing on the subjection of the 'outsider', we are prompted to think differently about

Foucault, power, and education
Section 1 is a general introduction to his work. In Section 2, his account of power/knowledge is outlined. Power/knowledge turns us into governable individuals who will lead useful, practical and docile lives tied to our real selves by knowledge of ourselves. This power/knowledge is exercised in what Foucault calls 'the disciplines':

The ideas of Michel Foucault are an obvious point of reference for social researchers studying schools. In Discipline and Punish, Foucault explicitly analyses schooling as an apparatus of modern disciplinary power. And it is easy to draw parallels between his well-known account of the Panopticon and the ways in which surveillance works in educational institutions.

Foucault and education
Early life Youth: 1926–1946. Paul-Michel Foucault was born on 15 October 1926 in the city of Poitiers, west-central France, as the second of three children in a prosperous and socially conservative upper-middle-class family. Family tradition prescribed naming him after his father, Paul Foucault, but his mother insisted on the addition of "Michel"; referred to as "Paul" at school, he ...
