Infections do not usually cause signs, but red blood cell destruction (hemolysis) can be seen in dogs that have had their spleens removed. The parasites are transmitted through the transfer of infected blood (for example, blood transfusions or contaminated needles) or through the bites of lice, flies, ticks, and mosquitoes.

Blood Parasites of Dogs - Dog Owners - Merck Veterinary Manual

Blood pressure is given as a reading of two numbers, such as 110/70. The higher number (systolic) is the pressure when the heart beats. The diastolic, or lower number shows the pressure between the heartbeats, while the relaxed heart is refilling with blood. Normal blood pressure readings are lower than 120/80.
