The New 2012 Mathews Heli m is the ideal bow for those who choose not to be weighed down by their equipment...literally. It is the answer for bowhunters who push themselves to the limit and expect their bow to be a positive factor in the journey "getting there"; rather than a burden that diminishes their chances of success by slowing them down.

As a rule, longer, heavier bows shoot better, but there are exceptions to that-and the Heli-M is a notable one. Unsurprising was the bow's smoothness, which is the signature trait of Mathews' single-cam technology. I'm glad you like the helim, I have the z7 extreme tactical version and its by far my favorite mathews so far. I was just poking fun:) I work some wkends at our local mathews bow shop (a top 100 national retailer for many years) I see people all the time coming in cussing mathews bows then take it in the back and shoot a few arrows threw it, and most of the time they leave with one :)
