were understood as mathematical, immutable, eternal and divine.<sup>10</sup> Hence, if God were to do a miracle in order to fulfill His will for creation, it would be a contradiction of Himself. It has been observed by many that Hume's understanding of natural laws also entails a commitment to determinism. Such a view promotes the Miracles and Natural Law: Are They Compatible?

Natural law in the Enlightenment and the modern era. Other Scholastic thinkers, including the Franciscan philosophers John Duns Scotus (1266–1308) and William of Ockham (c. 1285–1347/49) and the Spanish theologian Francisco Suárez (1548–1617), emphasized divine will instead of divine reason as the source of law. This "voluntarism" influenced the Roman Catholic jurisprudence of the ...

Keith Ward suggests that a miracle should be characterized as "an event beyond the possibility of physical law-like explanation." <sup>44</sup> To him, "the notion of an event beyond the natural powers of objects is more satisfactory than Hume's idea of the violation of a law, since it does not carry the connotation of arbitrary interference, but rather of a temporary elevation of powers beyond ...

Perspective Digest : Miracles and Natural Law

Natural law is the universal standard that directly reflects human nature; natural law can be determined by careful consideration of the human condition, regardless of cultural influences. Jefferson considered the equality of man, and life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness (purpose and livelihood) to be born directly from the nature of humanity.

A miracle is an event which the forces of nature—including the natural powers of man—cannot of themselves produce, and which must, therefore, be referred to a supernatural agency (Fisher 1900, 9). A miracle is a divine operation that transcends what is normally perceived as natural law; it cannot be explained upon any natural basis.

What Does the Bible Say About Miracles? : Christian Courier

Therefore miracles can be distinguished from purely natural occurrences. A miracle is a fact in material creation, and falls under the observation of the senses or comes to us through testimony, like any natural fact. Its miraculous character is known: from positive knowledge of natural forces, e.g., the law of gravity, the law that fire burns.

The Natural Order of the World. A miracle was an extraordinary event which, precisely because it was so different from the normal course of events, provided evidence of God's direct intervention; hence the biblical term nes, 'sign,' for a miracle. The miracle is an indication of divine intervention in particular circumstances.
