Spring At the latest, prune well before the buds swell and new leaves begin to develop. Summer To direct the growth by slowing the branches you don't want; or to slow or "dwarf" the development of a tree or branch, pruning should be done soon after seasonal growth is complete. The reason for the slowing effect is that you

Pruning a New Hedge. Begin pruning a newly planted hedge as soon as it is well established and making new growth. Clip off at least half of the new shoots three or four times a year until the new hedge is evenly dense. Aim for a sloped shape as discussed above; use a hand-held pruner to do this. This drawing will give you an idea on how to do this:

Now we come to the spur-pruning (also known as cordon-trained) vines, in which the trunk of the vine is allowed to extend horizontally along a wire, yielding shoots over many years. Common in warm-climate growing regions, spur-pruned vines are easier to prune than many cane-pruning systems, especially Guyot, due to the height of the vines.
